In October, the 43rd annual Society for Ethnomusicology meeting was held at IUB's Indiana Memorial Union. Bernhard Woma, (right) master xylophone player for Ghana's National Dance Company, was one of many featured performers at the conference.

Bloomington Worldwide Fellowship hosted a reception in January, welcoming new international students to Bloomington. Opening remarks were given by Associate Dean and Director of International Services Kenneth Rogers, President of the Bloomington-Worldwide Friendship, Inc., Louanna Cociarella, and Patrick O'Meara, dean for International Programs. Pictured above are new graduate students in education, Yusuf Koc and Deniz Peker, both from Turkey.

In November, Roger Hamburg (right) (SPEA/Political Science, IUSB) attended an international conference of the General Assembly of the Atlantic Council held in Lisbon. Hamburg serves as an Academic Associate on the Atlantic Council of the United States, and his trip was funded by the IUSB Chancellor of Academic Affairs, IUSB's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and IUSB's Office of International Programs. Speakers at the conference included the supreme commander of NATO.

In November, IUPUI's new dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Herbert Saatkamp (right), was invited by the Office of International Programs to meet faculty and staff on the Bloomington campus involved with area studies centers and international activities. Saatkamp (second from left) chats with Patrick O'Meara, Richard Stryker (Overseas Study), and Virginia DeLancey (African Studies Program).
